Re: Unauthorized Use of Major League Baseball Players' Rights

Dear Messrs. Steiner and Weiss:

We are licensing enforcement counsel for the Major League Baseball Players Association (“MLBPA”). As you know, the MLBPA is the exclusive group licensor for the publicity rights of active Major League baseball players who are members of the MLBPA. The MLBPA thus controls the right to use, license and sublicense the players’ names, numbers, nicknames, likenesses, signatures, playing records and/or biographical data (“Player Rights”) in commercial settings. As a former licensee, we know that Steiner Sports Marketing & Memorabilia (“Steiner”) is aware of the MLBPA’s exclusive ownership of the Players Rights.

It has recently come to our attention that Steiner is advertising, marketing, promoting and selling unlicensed merchandise utilizing the Player Rights. Specifically, we have learned that Steiner is using the Player Rights for commercial purposes by, for example, advertising and selling photographs of various Major League baseball players. This unauthorized use violates our client’s exclusive rights to the Players Rights and is a breach of the post-termination provisions of your license agreement.

On behalf of the Major League Baseball Players Association, we hereby demand that Steiner immediately (1) cease and desist all sales, distribution, marketing and advertising of all unlicensed merchandise or other products utilizing the Players Rights; (2) immediately recover and destroy any and all unlicensed merchandise or other products sold in violation of the Major League Baseball Players Association’s exclusive group licensing rights and in breach of your previous license agreement; and (3) provide specific information to our client concerning the number of units sold containing the Players Rights and the amount of revenue generated by Steiner through the unauthorized use of the Players Rights.

Unless you cease the offending activities immediately and fully comply with these demands, the MLBPA will have no choice but to consider Steiner’s on-going actions further evidence of Steiner’s intentional attempt to damage the MLBPA and to infringe upon its rights and the rights of its player-members.

Please confirm within ten (10) business days of the day of this letter that Steiner will fully comply with the above-listed demands. If we do not hear from you on within ten business days, we will promptly advise our client as to all available legal remedies against your infringement.

Very truly yours,
